Your Taxes at Work

Suppose you could walk into the office of your boss and announce "Guess What! The BBC radio just recorded 42 minutes of tapes, and said I did an outstanding job!" What would you give for this moment, and what would you expect your company to give to you, or the BBC, for this chance? One would expect a pay raise or promotion. Now suppose your boss said "You are fired! And we will replace you with someone with five years less experience!" That is the nightmare I face on the Outer Banks.

I have worked six seasons for the National Park Service on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. In, fact, I have seniority at the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse with five seasons. During a winter at Wright Brothers National Memorial, BBC radio arrived and asked to tape a program and interview. I foolishly agreed to do both. The BBC said that the results were outstanding, despite poor acoustics. It was a great chance for the National Park Service, the Outer Banks, and all North Carolina to shine before millions of people all over the world. Most companies can only dream of this opportunity, and would pay a fortune to get it. But the following winter season, I was not rehired anywhere on the Outer Banks. So far, I have no summer position either, despite the fact that everyone who worked last year at the lighthouse was promised rehire this summer if they wanted it. I really want a student hire, which is common in the park service. Bureaucrats never do the right thing, just obey the right rules. People who fill out forms well get jobs, but people who do outstanding service that has no blank on a form, like a BBC program, are terminated.

So I have contacted the Governor, both North Carolina Senators, both my Maryland Senators, Representative Steny Hoyer, the Director of the Park Service, and the Secretary of the Interior. The Governor's office and one Maryland Senator have agreed to study the problem. North Carolina has a booming international tourist economy, so you would assume that people like Senator Dole would show some interest. I will also ask that the Department of Labor, Department of Justice, and Government Accountability Office to investigate what went wrong.

I hope everyone finds this amusing, it is all at taxpayer expense. First, everyone will foot the bill to choose the winter and summer hires I could have filled for no extra cost. Then all the federal investigations I have started or will started. Then, items like training my replacement when I need little training. Next time, the park service should just pay the BBC to go away, that would be cheaper. Because all this money is being spent on losing a free chance for a radio broadcast. I do not mind doing things for the parks for free. Nobody in this line of work is working for money. The park service is a job where no one will bribe you even if you are corrupt. But I will not work for the parks to get hurt. The student hire for two years that I want pays 50,000$, which is a lot of money lost for a minor crime like attempting an international honor like this. I, Stephen Moroz, will contact the BBC and request that all the Wright Brothers tapes be erased unless I am promptly given rehire at Cape Hatteras Lighthouse.

Sincerely,

Stephen Moroz
